THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE CAV-ENDISH MURDER.

The Witness Cary Grows More Defiant—The Reminiscences of the Plot Exposed—How Cary was Induced to Testify—The Anticipated

DUBLIN, February 19.—Hearing of the prisoners charged with conspiracy to murder government officials was resumed to-day. All the prisoners were again placed in the dock. Amid hisses, one of the prisoners shouted "Future Lord Mayor Carey." The latter shook his head menacingly at his former comrades. His examination was then resumed. He spoke more confidently than he did on Saturday, and replied to the cross examination of counsel sharply and testily. He deposed, amid hisses by the prisoners, that he belonged to the Fenians but not to the supreme council. The object of the Fenians was to separate Ireland from England, the former country being then harassed by coercion. He had no idea that Lord Frederick Cavendish was to be murdered by the Fenians was attacked. He was stupefied when he heard of the former's murder. On being cross-examined Carey said he gave information regarding the murder two days ago, when everybody else did. He was the first person to do so. He decided to give evidence directly after he was examined, although he did not do so until Thursday. Carey was re-examined by Mr. Murphy, crown counsel. He said that he had seen an article in the Irish Freeman's Journal stating that the three principals were to be removed from the castle, the murder of Burke was decided upon. Twenty-one of the prisoners have been committed for

Special To The Constitution.

DUBLIN, February 19.—Carey produced a copy of the Freeman's Journal from his pocket to confirm his statement in regard to the determination of the conspirators to murder.

Mr. Burke. His action created a sensation in the city, is expected that the prisoners will be released. Mr. Mark Mulvey stated that he hoped to be able to produce evidence that would make Mulvey number 1. The prisoners were remanded for commitment to-morrow morning for the purpose of the coroner's inquest. The coroner's jury will be sworn to-morrow and the coroner has accepted the evidence that the crown had accepted the evidence of the prisoner, who might have been the director or instigator of the tragedy. It is expected that the coroner will report to the public safety and for the public good. He trusted that the executive had thereby obtained power to perfectly penetrate this fearful mystery, and he hoped to make an announcement to the public as to the perpetrators of the murder. When Carey's deposition was read and he corrected it in several particulars, and he modified the statement concerning Mrs. Mulvey, he stated that he was not sure if she was the wife of Frank Byrne. He also corrected the statement that James Mullett was in his company when he and Curley met on December 1. Counsel for the prisoners objected to the alterations, saying that Carey had discovered from the newspapers that Mulett was in prison at the time of the alleged meeting. The magistrate allowed his objection and the deposition was taken in the absence of Mulett. A discrepancy. The prisoners committed for trial include all that were under examination except Whelan, who was not in the dock to-day. The public present in the court today joined in hissing Carey. The only remarkable feature so far has been the callousness of Carey while under examination.

THE ASSASSIN MUST LOOK FOR HIS LONDON, February 29.—The evidence given on Saturday in the trials at Dublin have caused intense excitement in London. It is reported that an Irish member of parliament has been arrested. It is asserted that the police have warrants for the arrest of certain gentlemen named in the evidence. It is common knowledge for Dublin on Saturday. There is much conjecture as to the object of his ist. Mrs. Byrne, mentioned in Carey's evidence as the wife of the secretary of the land and labor league in Great Britain, was arrested in London. The British government has charged her with conspiring to murder government officials.

ASSASSINIS IN AMERICA.

The Times this morning says: It is stated that P. J. Sheridan and Thomas Brennan, an Irishman and an Englishman, respectively, are busy as having been concerned in the conspiracy against the lives of English officers, are now in America, and that Great Britain has requested their extradition. The government has agreed to extradite them, but the Irish militia this year for the usual training, they have not been called for several years, owing to the disturbed state of Ireland. John Barker, one of the conspirators, is now in London, and is charged with conspiring to murder government officials, and suffering from phthisis in the prison hospital.

IRISH LEAGUE RESPONSIBLE.

The correspondence from Dublin says, "There is little doubt that the authorities will be able to connect the conspiracy with Fenianism as well as with Fenianism. The Times, in a leading article says: the conspiracy against the lives of English officers, mentioned in Carey's evidence, on Saturday can only be allayed by a thorhigh disclosure of the accounts of the league, subject to an independent audit. Until this is done the league will be under suspicion of maintaining secret relations with criminal conspirators of the type of the Times.

"What is to be thought of the offer of 'Arnell to place the influence of Davitt, Egan, Sheridan and Boyton at the disposal of the government for the restoration of order in Ireland, or of the statesmanship which, in spite of the warnings of the press and public opinion, with Ireland as a condition, would accept of 'Arnell's conditions for peace. The press association says: 'There is reason to believe that there is no doubt whatever concerning the name and identity of the man referred to by James Carey in his testimony on Saturday as "number 1." It is believed that he is concealed in London, where he arrived within the last forty-eight hours.

DISCUSSED IN THE HOUSE.

LONDON, February 19.—In the house of commons this afternoon Sir Herbert Maxwell, conservative, asked whether P. J. Sheridan, alluded to by Cary in his testimony on Saturday, was the man who was connected with the Kilmainham treaty negotiations. Mr. Trevelyan, chief secretary for Ireland, answered: "Yes." Lord Randolph Churchill gave notice on behalf of Mr. Gorst, that in view of the confession of the assassins in Ireland he would move an amendment to the address in answer to the speech from the throne, that no further concessions be made to lawless agitations.

ATLANTA, GA., FEBRUARY 20, 1883.

INDICATIONS for the south Atlantic states, fair weather in northeastern portions, local rain in the southeastern portion, stationary or slight rise in temperature, northeast winds becoming variable, slight changes in pressure.

The farmers of Georgia will be assembled in Macon to-day. The men who till the soil are the men who make the state, and while they are lacking in pretence they make it up in solid worth.

"Living a fast life" is given as the reason why Savannah youth could not remain in the city and face his employer. Such young men may yet learn that it is not half as necessary to shine in society as it is to be honest.

The bane of Ireland is secret political societies. The unwary have been entrapped into them to become the dupes of schemers who keep at safe distance from danger, and whose only interest in patriotism is the money they can make out of it.

The acceptance of Jules Ferry of the premiership of France, calls into the service of the country a man who is at once capable and patriotic. He will soon bring order out of the recent scare, and set an example of self-reliance such as cannot fail to have an effect upon the people.

The scene on the streets of Rome on yesterday, in which a young man appealed with confidence to his hip-pocket, can only be properly followed by a scene in the superior court room, in which the judge will be in the act of asking the prisoner if there is any reason why sentence should not now be pronounced.

The completion of the Georgia Pacific as far as Anniston, this week, gives the road a tangible existence, and realizes the hopes of the early advocates of the forgotten Georgia Western road. It will not be long now until the north Alabama line will be as familiar a feature on the streets of the city as the Corbin or the East Tennessee.

ATHENS is taking decided steps in industrial progress. The survey of a new railroad is to be made at once, three hundred new houses are in sight, a bobbin mill is to be introduced and even the night watchmen have become inventors. Added to this, Gantt gets out his paper every day in such trim shape that one would think Athens to be a chip off the old Grecian block.

ALTHOUGH the orchard products of the country were not much increased in the ten years, covered by the last census, yet the increase in the southern states was marked and gratifying. In most of the states south of the Potomac the increase was ten-fold. In Florida the value of orchard products was only $33,639 in 1870, and $788,295 in 1880. Texas shows almost an equal increase. The figures of Georgia are not at hand.

The charter and township elections have just been held in New York, and the returns uniformly show handsome democratic gains. Counties that had not gone democratic until Governor Cleveland was a candidate for governor, have elected democratic boards of supervisors this spring. This leads the Albany Evening Journal to confess in the depths of bitterness that "the tidal wave of last November has not yet receded."

The republicans yesterday acknowledged the failure of their attempt to force the tariff bill through the house by moving to suspend the rules in order to take up the bill for the reduction of internal revenue taxation. The refusal of the house to take up the bill deprives Mr. Kelley and his friends of a chance to claim credit for reduction long deferred. It is safe to say that no tariff legislation will precede the national canvass, thus leaving the question an open one for presidential conventions to pass upon.

In the tariff debate that is now drawing to a close, Mr. Carlisle in the house and Mr. Beck in the senate have borne the heat and burden of the struggle in behalf of the masses. Both have worked day and night to lessen the burdens of the people. They have endeavored in the face of an insolent majority and an indefatigable lobby to reduce duties as the list of articles come up. They have had of course valuable assistance, but they stand out as the leaders of the opposition to the policy of protection.

THE SOUTHERN QUESTION.

Mr. Carl Schurz, in his letter to the Savannah News, in regard to the prevalence of homicide and the accompanying spirit of lawlessness in the south makes quite a number of good points, but there is one that ought especially to attract the attention of the young men who are of the opinion that bar-room rows and street fights, and hip-pockets crammed with revolvers are a part and parcel of the chivalry of which they have heard and read so much. Mr. Schurz thinks the imaginations of those who are ready to "draw" and shoot on the slightest provocation, have been seduced by the talk of the higher type of chivalrous manhood which is quick to redress a wrong or to avenge an insult, until they have come to believe that it is the characteristics of "a perfect gentleman" to engage in a row on the slightest provocation.

The particular point to which we desire to call attention is worth studying. Alluding to the excuse which is frequently given for the homicidal practice, namely the "high spirits of the descendants of the cavaliers," Mr. Schurz says that it should not be forgotten that an overwhelming majority of the descendants of that race live, not in the south, but in England. This being true, he goes on to say that "the best of the cavalier spirit has descended upon those of the native soil, together with their names, their escutcheons, and their family traditions—at least as much as upon the side-lines in the southern states."

He then points out that the English descendants of the cavaliers of England, while retaining all their pride of ancestry and a lively sense of honor, never engage in street rows, never "draw" and shoot at other people, though no doubt they have their disputes and quarrels. In point of fact their family pride and their sense of honor make them the great conservators of law and order in civilized England, and Mr. Schurz is of the opinion that if any English descendant of the cavaliers "should try to demonstrate his cavalier spirit and his quickness to resent an insult by whipping out a revolver on every occasion, or by going after an enemy with a shotgun, they would look upon him as an unmitigated ruffian, entirely unworthy of their society, and they would have him tried and hanged, if he actually killed anybody."

All this is very true, and the truth of it ought to be taken to heart by the young men who habitually carry pistols. We need not say here that the young men, or the old men for that matter, whose hip-pockets are a burden to them, are not representatives of the best society of the south in any sense. But this is no defense against criticism. It is a fact that there are men in the south who habitually carry pistols, and it is a further fact that they are tolerated by the society that they do not represent, and the public sentiment which is opposed to concealed weapons or to any other species of ruffianism has failed to make any decided impression upon them.

The question is, is this failure due to our grand juries or to the judges of our circuit courts? The responsibility lies somewhere; but where?

THE SOUTHEASTERN POOL.

The Railroad Gazette of the 16th inst. contains the official report of the pool meeting held in Washington last month. This report includes a copy of the new traffic agreement of the roads represented, namely, the roads east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers. The East Tennessee and the Danville companies are parties to this agreement, and the new bargain to maintain rates is probably fortified against all mishaps that can be foreseen.

This agreement is a very lengthy document, and a summary is all we have space for. It provides for an annual meeting of the associated companies in Atlanta on the third Wednesday of October. In this convention each road is to have one vote, regardless of the question of mileage or revenue. The general commissioner, Mr. Powers, is to be the chairman of the executive committee. The other members of this committee are named by the eleven leading roads of freight lines, the Western and Atlantic road being one of the eleven. The general commissioner is the chief executive officer of the association, and the executive committee has control of its affairs, if the committee can act unanimously. When it cannot, the matter in question is referred for final action to the chief commissioner and the arbitrator. The decision of these two men is final. Of course if the two members of the board of arbitration, cannot agree they are authorized to call in a third man to act with them in determining a given vexed question. Mr. Thomas H. Carter is the present arbitrator. The general commissioner is the disbursing officer of the association, and all the Green Line business is placed in his hands. The board of arbitration decides all applications for an appointment of business, and the manner of appointment is then set forth in great detail. Each company is required to carry its allotted proportions as nearly as possible, and settlements are to be made for any excess carried at rates to be fixed by agreement or arbitration; but no penalty is to be imposed upon a company which carries an excess for the benefit of any company that refuses to carry its portion. It is distinctly agreed that no reduction, rebates or considerations of any kind shall be offered to influence shippers or to secure their preference for any road or line. The members of the pool are forbidden to deal with transportation companies that are not members, unless they first obtain the consent of the association. This pooling arrangement is to be ended on the last day of this year, subject, of course, to renewals without limit by consent of the roads interested. The removal of the chief office of the pool to Atlanta on the 1st of April was agreed to just before the meeting adjourned without day. The contract of the associated companies consists of twenty-five sections, and it is not likely that it would have been spread before the public if its signers had been satisfied that it was iron-clad and impregnable. The best laid plans of pools, however, like those of mice and men, do sometimes get limber and fall to pieces, and that, too, with little warning or grumbling. It is a matter of a cut here and a cut there and a system of underground work; and then is ushered in a brief harvest of the people.

A GREAT many of our esteemed republican contemporaries are engaged in placing various kinds of onuses on the democratic party. There is an onus connected with the tariff bill, an onus connected with an extra session, and an onus which you may turn. Still, a few onuses more or less, make no difference to the party which is to elect the next president.

Mr. GOULD announced to a newspaper man the other day that he was much saddened at the news of ex-Governor Morgan's death. This is very interesting. If anything, each can sadder Mr. Gould, there is hope for the country when he buys up the government. He will not be too hard on the people after they are dead.

The young man with a hip-pocket will regret to learn that the young blood among the colored people invariably go armed. Thus we have two fine generations coming on—young white men with their pockets full of pistols and dirks, and young negro men with their pockets full of pistols and razors.

ONE honest republican has had the manliness and the decency to protest against the admission of lobbyists to the privileges of the senate as private secretaries of senators. It is a great pity some honest democrat didn't think of this.

MR. ERASTUS BRAINERD.

This gentleman, who has been for nearly a year connected with THE CONSTITUTION in a responsible capacity, resigned his position yesterday.

While Mr. Brainerd goes to take editorial charge of a paper that will be in more or less competition with THE CONSTITUTION, it is but justice to him to say that he leaves of his own accord, and he has proved himself to be a man of high character and high ability. He has been a stranger, won the confidence and esteem of the managers of this paper. Into whatever field he goes, be it local or otherwise, he will carry with him the respect and friendly sentiments of those with whom he has been associated, and THE CONSTITUTION wishes him the success he deserves as a hard-working and conscientious journalist.

In this connection we may as well say that the rumors of his going to Atlanta as a rival of THE CONSTITUTION are unfounded. He is to be assured that at least two journals will be launched this week or next. We have no criticism to make on the situation. THE CONSTITUTION has its field, and will try to fill it intelligently and honestly. If there is room for more papers in Atlanta, then there ought to be papers to fill the vacancy. If there is no room, this fact will soon be made apparent. Either there is or not, the paper that takes itself the trouble of the editor, the most earnest and effective worker, and the safest counsellor, will be sure of enough patronage to repay its efforts.

AN old story, always worth retelling, has been revived in Washington, about Dr. Thornton who had charge of the patent bureau in the early years of this government. He claimed to have been an inventor of steam navigation, and to have made experiments on the Delaware before Fulton made his on the Hudson. In fact, he charged Fulton with being a mere imitator of himself. Naturally a lively fellow, Henry George once wrote about these two men, and when Fulton went to Washington to make a personal discussion of the case, but only one of it for long time. "A," answered Fulton, "surely you must admit," said Fulton, "in apparent good faith," "that I was the original inventor of the process of making plank from sawdust by hydraulic pressure?" "Oh no," said the other, by contemptuously, "there is nothing new in that. I have known of it for long time." "A," answered Fulton, "quizzically, 'but you never knew of my invention—how to make plank out of pine sawdust?'"

A LITTLE SARCASTIC HUMOR.

"BE JABBERS," exclaimed an Irishman, "I've slept sixteen hours! I went to bed at eight and got up at eight."

Two boarding house keepers are comparing notes. "It pains me, Mrs. Miggles, that your chicken salad is never found out," says Miggles, "or heard none of the boarders complain." "You see," exclaimed Mrs. Miggles, "I allus chop up a few feathers with the veal."

A LADY artist working long and hard over the painting of a human figure the other day, finally threw down her brush and threw her fellow-workers into fits of laughter at the same time by unexpectedly exclaiming, in a naive despair: "Now I realize why even God made landscape before he attempted to create a human figure!"

HER lips were like the leaves, he said, by autumn's crimson tinted; Some people's autumn leaves preserve By pressing them, she hinted. The meaning of the gentle hint, he did not discern. And so she clasped her round the neck, And glued his lips to her's.

A SOCIAL scientist, in showing the number of men and women in each 100 who ate with their knives in the public eating rooms where his investigations were pursued, states that in London there are only three women and seven men out of a hundred who try to scoop up their food with a knife. This is a human figure, and the fact that it is a human figure is not to be despised.

A COUNTRYMAN, with his bride, stopped at a hotel the other day. At dinner, when the waiter presented a bill of fare, the young man inquired, "What's that?"

"Bill of fare, sir," replied the waiter. The countryman took it in his hands, looked inquiringly at his wife and then at the waiter, and finally said, "I have kept it in my pocket. How much is it?"

HE passed: Two gentlemen, one of them a legislator, strolled carelessly past a saloon. After they had passed twenty steps beyond the saloon the legislator stopped and said: "Let us go back and get a drink." "I thought you promised me a drink," said the other. "I have kept it in my pocket. How much is it?"

THE funeral of Wagner took place in Bayreuth yesterday, in the presence of numerous deputations, many artists and military and civil officers, a representative of the king and a large crowd of people. AN old story, always worth retelling, has been revived in Washington, about Dr. Thornton who had charge of the patent bureau in the early years of this government. He claimed to have been an inventor of steam navigation, and to have made experiments on the Delaware before Fulton made his on the Hudson. In fact, he charged Fulton with being a mere imitator of himself. Naturally a lively fellow, Henry George once wrote about these two men, and when Fulton went to Washington to make a personal discussion of the case, but only one of it for long time. "A," answered Fulton, "surely you must admit," said Fulton, "in apparent good faith," "that I was the original inventor of the process of making plank from sawdust by hydraulic pressure?" "Oh no," said the other, by contemptuously, "there is nothing new in that. I have known of it for long time." "A," answered Fulton, "quizzically, 'but you never knew of my invention—how to make plank out of pine sawdust?'"

THE BLACK VENUS.

From the New York Tribune. It was ascertained and made known by one of the old poets that "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." This venerable truth receives a fresh illustration in the spectacle of "The Black Venus," which was revived here on Monday night at Niblo's theater. The Black Venus is a stout, copper-colored female, who wears three steel spikes upon the top of her head, and is the proud possessor of a tremendous voice and a portentous abdomen.

A "MAN without a country" is about to appear before a French court for the purpose of having a country assigned to him. His name is Gilbert. He was born at Nazareth, near Lille. His father was born at Belgium at a time when Belgium formed a part of French territory. On the ground that he was not a French citizen he was recently expelled from France for exceeding the local authorities of a French commune, and escorted to the Belgian frontier. His case was taken up in the Belgian chamber and the ministry declared him to be a citizen of France. He has therefore returned to France and caused himself to be arrested for violating the decree of expulsion, in order that his nationality may be definitely decided.

Special to the Constitution.

New York, February 19.—Judge Ingraham denied today Salmi Marse's application for a mandamus to compel the mayor to issue a license for a theater where he intends to present the Passion Play. The application was based on the grounds that the building in which the rehearsal was to take place was Mr. Marse's private residence; that the exhibition was to be given as an entertainment for his friends, and that the police had no more right to enter the building for the purpose of interfering with the rehearsal than they had to stop piano playing, dancing or amateur theatricals in a private house. Quite a number of people were disappointed last night when they found that no dress rehearsal of the Passion play would be given. On the door of the building was posted a placard stating that the play was necessarily postponed until some evening this week, as the police were entitled to notice before an injunction was granted, and that the police had no more right to enter the building for the purpose of interfering with the rehearsal than they had to stop piano playing, dancing or amateur theatricals in a private house. A GOOD GIVER.

How Atlanta is Remembered in the Will of W. E. Dodge.

New York, February 19.—One of the bequests in the will of William E. Dodge is five thousand dollars to the Atlanta university. Lincoln university, the Hampton and Carlisle institutions will get considerable amounts. The entire sum given for educational objects is about $300,000. The smallest gift is $2,000 and the largest $50,000. The executors are Mrs. Dodge and her two sons, William E. and D. Stuart Dodge. It is dated May 27, 1881, and follows other will made by the testator in former years. Mrs. Dodge receives a large portion of the estate to use as she desires, no conditions being imposed. The family's city home, at No. 225 Madison avenue, with all its furniture, paintings, library, etc., and the summer residence at Tarrytown are left to her. An equal amount of money is left to each of the seven sons, and three of these will carry on the large business interests of the estate in which they are already engaged. The stocks are not to be sold immediately, and five years are to elapse before all the bequests are paid, in order that the legacies may receive the largest possible results from the estate. Some of them are to be paid in annual installments. In addition to Mr. Dodge's wife and children, his nephews, nieces, grandchildren, sisters and other relatives are all treated with generosity. The servants in his house, the secretary, bookkeepers, and clerks, who had been in his employ for a considerable time, are also legacies. It is estimated that the estate will net about $5,000,000.

THE BROOKLYN EAGLE.

Changes in the Management in Favor of Thomas Kinella.

New York, February 19.—A further change has been made in the ownership and stock control of the Brooklyn Eagle, so that Thomas Kinella will remain as its editor, a post he has filled for twenty-two years. The recent purchase of the Union Argus by Mr. Kinella and Colonel Hester was on account of their insisting, as editor and publisher, that the Eagle should be absolutely controlled by those who pursued the business of journalism for its legitimate profits and honors. This is the statement Mr. Kinella makes in an editorial to-night. He says that the conditions insisted on having been acceded to, and absolute ownership of the paper having come into the hands of those actually conducting it, there will be no change of ownership. The paper will gain a public estimation by this change, as some of the influences on the former ownership were discreditable. Kinella and Hester expect to sell the Union Argus.

How Jumbo Lives.

Jumbo, P. T. Barnum's famous elephant, has now been in this country nearly a year. After traveling through most of the eastern states, he is now in the west. He is housed in winter quarters at Bridgeport, Me. He is the first of the line of showmen, said yesterday that Jumbo had grown a great deal. His height is fully seven inches greater than it was a year ago, and he has gained three-quarters of a ton in weight. At no time since his arrival here has he been fractious, he has always shown a docile and even temper. Scott, the keeper from the London Zoological garden, is still with him. Jumbo has recently shown much affection for the baby elephant, and when the latter is taken from him he becomes restless. He has been seen to be throwing his trunk around and uttering peculiar cries. Mr. Bailey asserts that nearly all the elephants have been brought to this country from Europe. This is attributed to the care and kindness bestowed upon them and the better understanding of their habits and requirements. He is the only people that ever succeeded in breeding elephants, said he; "climate has nothing to do with it; care, kindness and close attention are the only means by which we manage all animals." Cakes, pies, candies and other articles are still frequently received by Mr. Barnum for Jumbo.

sent to him from his little friends in England, where his memory is yet green. Jumbo's height now is thirteen feet four inches. A number of animals have been born to him during the winter quarters, among them kangaroos, lions, tigers, leopards, etc., and many have been received from Europe, making the collection here a most valuable one. The show will open at the Madison Square Garden on March 26.

A SORROWFUL TRAGEDY.

A Young Texas' Death in New York His Wife's Sad Ending.

New York, February 19.—One of the saddest tragedies ever known was the death of Jacob Ross Greene, who was until a few months ago a thriving young man in the town of Bastrop, Texas. He was engaged in the livery business, and was reported to be worth from $20,000 to $25,000, a sum which in that locality caused him to be looked upon as a man of wealth. His father was the wealthiest man in the county, his possessions being estimated at over $100,000. The son, who was thirty-five years of age, had married some years previously, and was the father of four children—two boys and two girls—the eldest of whom was about thirteen years old and the youngest five years. He was devotedly attached to his wife and the two had lived very happily together since their marriage. About five years ago his wife, after a severe attack of illness, died, leaving him a motherless child. This continued but for a short time, when she apparently regained her usual health. About the middle of last month the wife again began to talk and act queerly, and the fears of the husband were once more aroused. He became more assiduous in his attentions to her and hoped that by his company as much as possible, fearing she might do herself bodily harm. On the morning of the 28th of January, the mother prepared her children for school at an hour earlier than that to which they were accustomed. The little ones were sent to being sent off so early, but the mother insisted and they finally started for the schoolhouse. Something demanded Mr. Greene's attention at the house, but his wife was acting so oddly that he feared to leave her alone for a moment. Calling the servant girl he instructed her to bring him the movements of his wife, and not to let her out of her sight. This girl promised to do so, but upon mistaking her orders, she brought the unfortunate woman, however, and her tactics betrayed a certain craftiness. No sooner had the servant girl been instructed to bring her to the kitchen on the floor below. The servant hesitated to comply, but upon mistaking her orders, she brought her to the kitchen on the floor below. The servant hesitated to comply, but upon mistaking her orders, she brought her to the kitchen on the floor below.
